More Music at The Pantiles this September

The Pantiles in Tunbridge Wells is getting quite a reputation as the place to go for a great nights out of free musical entertainment, as three more local musicians perform on the historic bandstand during September.

Three separate evenings will provide distinct genres of music and cater for all musical tastes.

Rachel Taylor is the first act to take to the bandstand as she performs a stunning range of classic and accessible opera on Friday 19th September from 7.30 to 10pm. Perfect for a cultured evening out.

Then the fabulous Nick Weller Big Band will be performing well known favorites from the 60s, 70s and 80s in true big band style on Friday 26th September from 7.30 to 10pm. Come ready to boogie!

On Saturday 27th September local band 'Get a Grip' will perform a collection of acoustic pop-rock classics between 7.30 to 10pm to delight the crowds with some mellow melodies.

"We hope that the sun shines on The Pantiles as it did for the Jazz Season so that our visitors can treat themselves to great music and fabulous alfresco dining at our many restaurants and bars," explains Andrew Gower, The Pantiles, Centre Manager.

More information can be found on www.thepantilesonline.co.uk and keep a look out for the new Pantiles e-newsletter coming soon.
